Peak TV: The Growth in Originals

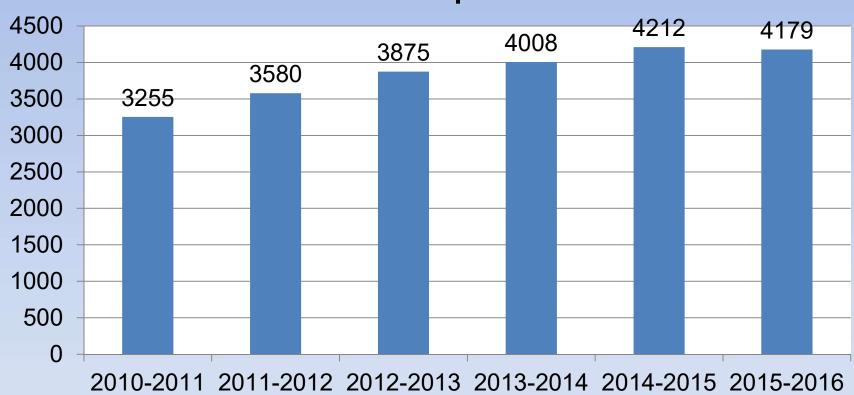

Dramatic Series

➤ 100 more original series airing in US on television and online compared to 2010

Peak TV: The Growth in Originals

Dramatic Episodes

- > 4000+ episodes per season has become the norm
- > Episode growth lower than series growth, reflecting shorter orders

TV Growth Drivers

Outlet Competition

 Increased number of outlets for consumers to choose from, original content is needed for differentiation

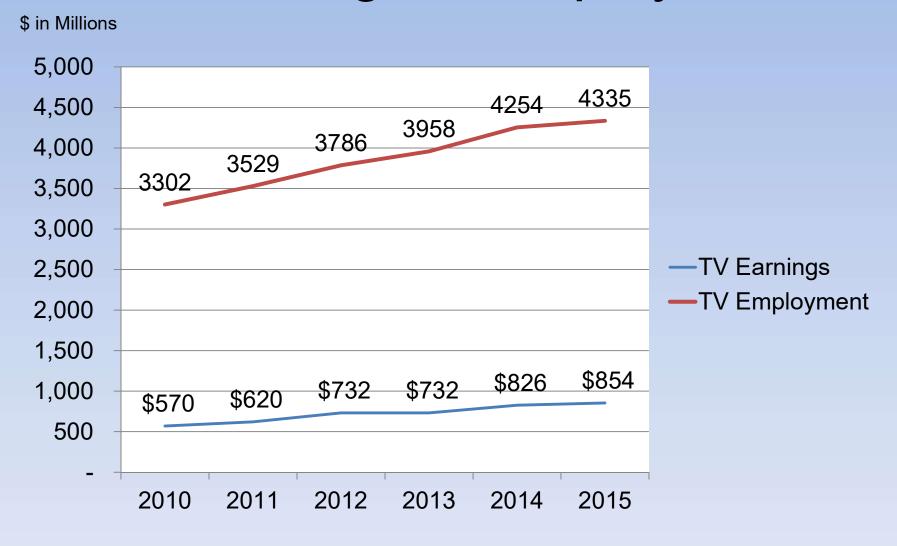

International Market

- $5 billion market for licensing U.S. series abroad
- Almost all series available internationally shortly after airing in U.S.
- Makes many TV series immediately profitable

Subscription Video on Demand

- $4.5 billion in TV licensing spend by Amazon, Netflix and Hulu contributing further to immediate series profitability
- 2012: 0 original series
- 2015: 44 original series

Feature Market

- # of WGA covered feature films remains steady
- # of films released in US continues to grow, driven by foreign films
 - > 326 foreign films released in US in 2015
- > But, top 100 films = 93% of box office

Feature Film Market Drivers

- International market now 70% of box office
 - ➤ U.S. market is mature, but income and population growth outside U.S. fuels international market growth
- Studios cut U.S. output while expanding abroad, focusing on local production for int'l markets
 - Fox, Disney, Sony & Warner Bros. involved in producing local pics in China, India, Korea and Europe

Feature Film Market Drivers

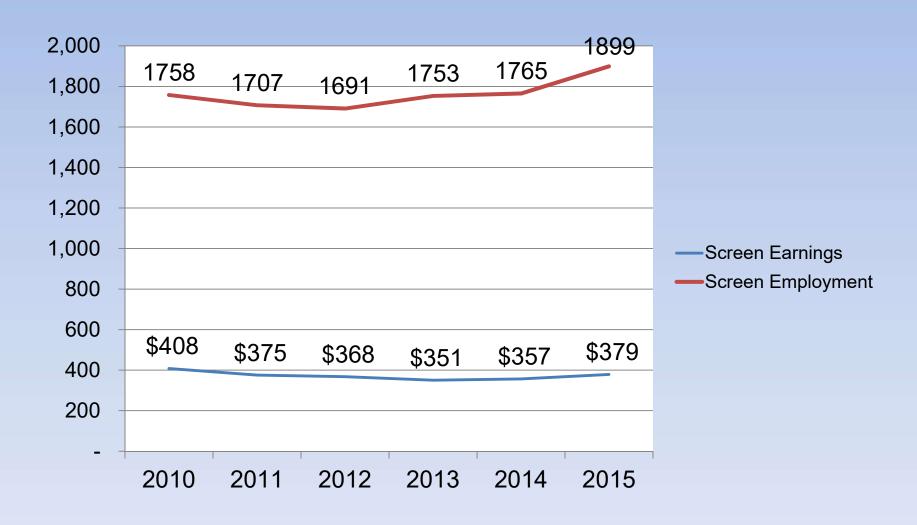

Creative Risk Reduction

- Pre-sold content reduces audience acceptance risk (book, sequels, superheroes)
- More tentpoles, fewer releases overall, concentrates the revenue, discourages competitors
- Playing to the international audience taps the highest growth market segment

Corporate Risk Reduction

- 3rd party financing is used selectively to offset risk, avoided on more certain projects
- DVD is NOT gone, it's just half its former self; still often the largest revenue source
- Studios sell to their own channels internationally, ensuring a buyer
